

Creativity and Decision Making Study

Recruiting participants now!

Do you have bipolar disorder, manic depression, or mania?

If so, this study may be a good fit for you!

Our research group in the Psychology Department at UC Berkeley is conducting a study to better understand how learning and decision making relate to creativity in people with and without bipolar disorder.

We are looking for people between the ages of 18-65 years old, who would be able to come to UC Berkeley campus for a single 3-hour session.

You can earn up to $85 for participation.

We will conduct a brief phone screen to make sure our study is a good fit. Please provide us with a phone number and some available times you can speak on the phone.
